A natural world in miniature

COLLECTA

Our Values
Safety, attention to detail, authenticity and excellence.

Our Vision
To create the natural world in miniature.

Our Mission
To inspire a love of nature and sense of wonder at its discovery of creatures, through our range of authentically detailed, hand painted miniature animal figurines.

To stimulate creativity, through sensory play and imagination, and to encourage curiosity about the natural world - play, learn, collect, develop.

To bring to life the prehistroic world and foster an understanding of the evolution and extinction of species. To highlight the importance of protecting our endangered species and their habitat.

To bring the highest standards of craftmanship, materials and safety to our collectable range. The play models are solid, safe in water, and dishwasher proof, ensure they are hygienically safe.

Prehistoric World

For 2026, CollectA once again captures the astonishing diversity of prehistoric life with six exciting new additions. Each model reflects the remarkable breadth of animals preserved in the fossil record, from colossal reptiles of the Mesozoic seas to a giant prehistoric giraffe – and naturally, there are dinosaurs too.

CollectA has worked in close partnership with the immensely talented German sculptor Matthias Geiger, whose careful attention to anatomical detail and naturalistic poses ensures that every new figure reflects the latest scientific thinking. What is particularly exciting this year is that half of the animals represented – Meraxes, Lokiceratops and Colossosuchus – have only recently been named and described. Their inclusion demonstrates CollectA's dedication to bringing the very latest fossil discoveries into the hands of children, collectors, educators and enthusiasts around the world.

The first of the new models is Tylosaurus, a giant marine reptile and one of the most fearsome predators of the Late Cretaceous seas. Added to the Age of Dinosaurs Popular range, some species exceeded 12 metres in length. The long, toothless "knob" at the end of its snout inspired its name, and fossil skulls even show damage in this area, suggesting it may have rammed prey or rivals. Named in the latter half of the 19th century, Tylosaurus has been known to science for more than 150 years, yet it still captures the imagination as one of the most formidable marine predators ever to have lived.

Joining the CollectA Age of Dinosaurs 1:40 range is Meraxes, a recently described giant carcharodontosaurid dinosaur from Argentina. At 10–11 metres long, Meraxes was a true apex predator. Its skull bore striking bony crests that probably played a role in display and social signalling, while its short forelimbs support the idea that reduced arms evolved repeatedly among large theropods. Named in 2022, the genus name takes inspiration from the fearsome dragon in George R. R. Martin's "A Song of Ice and Fire". The CollectA 1:40 scale Meraxes replica captures the majesty of one of the most complete carcharodontosaurids known to science.

CollectA has a proud tradition of introducing horned dinosaurs into its range, and this continues in 2026 with the addition of Lokiceratops, a spectacular horned dinosaur from Montana. Formally described in 2024, this 6.7-metre-long ceratopsian is remarkable for its immense, blade-like frill horns and the strikingly asymmetrical arrangement of its head ornamentation. Such unusual features reveal that ceratopsian dinosaurs were far more variable in appearance than previously imagined. Lokiceratops was named after the blade-wielding Norse god Loki.

Another addition is a replica of Magnapaulia, a huge lambeosaurine dinosaur from north-western Mexico. Once considered a species of Lambeosaurus, it was assigned its own genus in 2012. At around 12–13 metres in length, Magnapaulia ranks among the largest hadrosaurs known. Its broad tail suggests it may have been adapted for swimming, while an elaborate head crest hints at complex social behaviour. The CollectA figure captures the impressive size and distinctive features of this Late Cretaceous herbivore.

The CollectA Other Prehistoric Animals range is further expanded with Colossosuchus, a giant phytosaur from the Late Triassic of India. Formally named in 2023, its fossil remains come from a remarkable bonebed representing more than 20 individuals. Phytosaurs resembled modern crocodiles in appearance, but they were not closely related. Their nostrils, for example, were positioned near the eyes rather than at the tip of the snout. Growing to over 8 metres in length, Colossosuchus was one of the largest phytosaurs ever discovered.

Completing the 2026 line-up is a male Sivatherium giganteum. Named after the Hindu god Shiva, this enormous extinct giraffe was a barrel-chested browser with a shorter neck than its modern relatives. Males bore two pairs of ossicones, with the large, wing-like rear pair giving the skull a dramatic profile. Weighing more than 1.25 tonnes, Sivatherium is considered the heaviest ruminant mammal known. The CollectA figure captures the imposing presence of this prehistoric "Shiva's beast".

With these six remarkable figures, CollectA reaffirms its commitment to celebrating the rich diversity of our planet's prehistoric life, whilst also highlighting the excitement of recent fossil discoveries.

Wishing you all a happy and peaceful year.

Matthias Geiger

Matthias is a German sculptor with a great passion for Dinosaurs. In collaboration with Anthony Beeson and other consultants, he brings life to CollectA's vision of prehistoric animals.

*The female has a piece of modified dorsal fin ray that protrudes above her mouth like a fishing pole and can illuminate itself.
The male angler fish is much smaller compared with the female and not equipped to eat. He lives as a parasite onto the female and solely for fertilizing her eggs.

In Celtic and northern European folklore, the unicorn is depicted as a white horse-like animal with a long horn.
In the middle ages, it was commonly described as an extremely wild woodland creature, a symbol of purity and grace

Celtic Family Symbol
The Celtic symbol made up of three conjoined spirals in rotational symmetry is called Triskelionand means "three legs".
This Triple Spiral represents the family as mother-father-child, eternity as life-death-rebirth and past-present-future.
It also represents the three Celtic worlds: the spiritual world, the present world and the celestial world.

The Tree of Life
It is a representation of harmony and balance in nature.
The Tree of Life symbolized strength, a long life, wisdom, and rebirth.
The Celts also believed that they actually came from trees, and considered them magical, living beings.
Trees were said to guard the land and acted as a doorway into the spiritual world.

Celtic Knot
This pattern represents the interconnection of life and our place within the universe.
Celtic knotsare referred to as endless knots due to the fact that they do not have an end or a beginning. The endless knots represent the eternalness of nature.
